WESTERN HOTEL,

No. 228 MARKET STREET,

Sign of General Washington.

THE subscriber begs leave to inform his friends and the public, that he has taken that well known establishment in Market street, next door to the Pittsburgh Mail Stage Office, and lately occupied by Mr. George Yohe. To those who have been accustomed to resort to this house, it is unnecessary to point out its superior advantages. For the information of others we deem it necessary to state that its situation is central, high, healthy and convenient to business; an extensive range of back buildings consisting of lodging rooms, afford a fine view of the city to the eastward, and admit a free and uninterrupted circulation of air—and what will give them a decided preference in the opinion of many, is the attachment thereto of balconies, so constructed as not only to afford pleasant promenades, but easy means of escape in the event of any necessity from any sudden alarm of fire. The great Western Stages start every morning from the door, and on the premises is one of the best Livery Stables in the city, conducted by Mr. John Tomlinson, where travellers' horses will be faithfully attended to. With these advantages, and some other improvements now making added to his own unremitted exertions to please, the subscriber confidently hopes for, and very respectfully solicits a share of public patronage.

CASH,

I HAVE determined to sell my FARM, at the fork of Chartier's creek, in the county of Washington, fifteen miles from Pittsburgh, consisting of about 214 acres, so low for CASH as to make it a great object for any one having the command of money. Its advantages in point of soil, timber, water, sugar-camps, neighbourhood, proximity to mills, markets, the turnpike road from Washington to Pittsburgh, meeting houses and an exeellent college, are well known—Added to these, some enterprising individuals of capital, are now boring for Salt within a quarter of a mile of it, at a lick which has produced salt from the surface, so that no doubt is entertained of their success. This will be useful, not only to the vicinity in general, but it will be of peculiar benefit to the tract hereby offered for sale, as it will afford a constant market for the stone coal with which the land abounds. I will give the purchaser a PATENT in my own name and a general warranty deed. The title is indisputable. I am willing to dispose of eight or ten other tracts, on moderate terms.

Pittsburg Gazette

FRIDAY MORNING DECEMBER 10, 1819.

Morgan Neville having resigned his situation as Cashier of the Farmers and Mechanics Bank of Pittsburgh, in consequence of his being elected to the office of Sheriff of Allegheny county, Mr. John Scull late President of this Institution, was unanimously chosen as agent for the purpose of closing the concerns of the Bank.

Extract from the Minutes.

"Resolved, that the letter of resignation of Mr. Neville, together with the answer of this Board be published in the three papers of this place."

Gentlemen,

The arduous office to which I have been elected by the gratifying vote of my fellow citizens, lays me under the necessity of resigning my situation as the Cashier of the Farmers and Mechanics Bank of Pittsburgh. In doing this, I trust you will believe me, when I assure you that I am affected by no common sensations of melancholy regret; a separation from men and scenes of mere ordinary interest, where association and habit had produced an intimacy, is at all times disagreeable; but when this separation deprives us of the usual society of men from whom we have experienced the most delicate proofs of friendship and esteem, our feelings become doubly acute In this situation, gentlemen, am I now placed; I came to your board a stranger to most of you; you honored me with your choice, probably from the too partial representations of my warmest friends; from that moment I am proud to say, that our connection has been distinguished by the most unvarying harmony.

In relinquishing the situation which I have held in your Bank, I must be indulged in a little prolixity, not usual in mere letters of resignation, as my case is not a common one. In taking leave of your board, I confess that past scenes rush upon my memory in all their original colours and force; amongst the rest there is one which I felt as the most trying period of my life; I scarcely need mention that I allude to the robbery of this institution in 1818. A dark cloud indeed, seemed suspended over me, and for weeks my destiny was involved in doubt; during this anxious period I needed the support of friendship, and it is my pride to declare that that support was extended to me in its most gratifying form, by every individual of your board. However successfully the history of my previous life may have repelled the dark insinuations of malice, or the vulgar suggestions of folly, [illegible] negligence or inattention; although thro' the timely interference of providence, I was exculpated from even this charge, by a full discovery of facts, yet the attention of my friends are not the less appreciated; they are treasured in a grateful bosom, and their memory can only fade with life.

Before we separate, permit me to offer my testimony of the liberality, humanity & public spirit which has always distinguished your board, since I have been admitted to your councils; I can safely say I never witnessed a scene amongst you where prejudice influenced you, or private feelings interfered with your deliberations; the concerns of your fellow citizens committed to your care, were managed with feeling, and if you erred, it was the error of generosity.

I cannot conclude without congratulating you and myself on the fair prospects of the stockholders, notwithstanding the embarrassment of the times, and the tempest which had nearly overwhelmed us. The affairs of the bank are so near a close as to justify the assertion that the loss on the stock will be but trifling, if any. Trusting that your conduct will receive from the world, that reward which your plain, honest course has deserved, suffer me to subscribe myself

Most sincerely, your friend and servant.
MORGAN NEVILLE,

To the President and Directors of the Farmers & Mechanics Bank of Pittsburgh.

Pittsburgh, Nov. 29, 1819.

SIR,

THE directors of the Farmers and Mechanics Bank have received your letter, announcing an event which they have for some time past anticipated with mingled emotions of regret and satisfaction—regret, at being obliged to lose a valuable friend and serviceable officer; and satisfaction at his exaltation to a more useful and advantageous station.

The situation of every person, having any share in the management of banking, has for a long time past been delicate and arduous; and a circumstance which, however unfortunate, could not have been forseen or prevented on your part or ours, has rendered it peculiarly so, in our institution. To satisfy the pressing claims of our first, and in most instances indulgent creditors, without op[pressing] industrious debtors; to sus[tain] the [illegible]tion, of stock, were duties which, however conflicting, had equal and solemn claims upon our attention. In the performance of these duties we can truly say, that we have found in you an upright and able adviser and prompt assistant. Your fidelity to the institution, your polite and cheerful exertions in behalf of its creditors, your benevolent conduct towards its debtors, and, in short, your delicate and disinterested deportment towards the feelings and the interest of all, have placed you before the public in a manner which precludes the necessity of praise or compliment on our part. As your friends, however, we thank your friendship; as directors, we thank you for the candid co-operation with our wishes, and the unremitting attention to your own duty, which has lightened our labours, and so largely contributed to the respectability of the Bank.

Our long and intimate knowledge of your honour and integrity, would have prevented any blame from falling on you at the time of the robbery of the Bank, had the circumstances of that unfortunate affair been in any manner equivocal; but the developement which took place of all the incidents which accompanied that event, has left no room for doubt, and has contributed, with other events of your life, to shew the value of those virtues which have passed uninjured through every ordeal. We might say that your sensations on that occasion were too acute; but as they were sensations naturally attendant on a delicate and feeling sense of honor, we deeply participated in them, and we believe you will allow that we endeavoured, to the best of our abilities, to alleviate the pains which they occasioned you. But the necessity of our testimony on this point, is obviated by the recent and honourable proof which you have received of the public approbation, in being elected by the people to an office of trust and profit; the knowledge of this event forbids our expressing the regret which otherwise we should feel in losing you. We rejoice that you have been able to exchange a temporary, arduous and unprofitable post, for one more lucrative, where your extended sphere of action will give a greater range to your known patriotism and benevolence. We can only add, that we shall regard your future fortune with interest, and that we remain your friends

By the unanimous order of the Board of Directors,

JOHN ROSEBURGH,
JOHN HANNEN,
WILLIAM LECKY, } Committee.

MORGAN NEVILLE, Esq.

[illegible] ADVERTISER,
November 29.

Mr. PHILLIP'S SPEECH.

We have heretofore published several of the speeches delivered by Charles Phillips, Esq. (the celebrated Irish Orator,) both in public political meetings, and in courts of justice. We have now the pleasure of presenting a specimen of his eloquence on a new and very different occasion. The following is the substance of a speech which he delivered at Cheltenham, England, on the 7th of October, at the Fourth Anniversary of the Gloucestershire Missionary Society. It will probably be considered, by many of our readers, as one of his happiest efforts:

Mr. Phillips came forward, and thus addressed the chairman—"Sir, after the eloquence with which so many gentlemen have gratified and delighted this most respectable assembly, and after the almost inspired address of one of them, I feel almost ashamed of having acceded to the wishes of the committee by proposing the resolution which I have the honor to submit. I should apologise, Sir, for even the few moments intrusion which I mean to make upon this meeting, did I not feel that I had no right to consider myself as quite a stranger; did I not feel that the subject unites us all into one great social family, and gives to the merest sojourner the claim of a brother and a friend.—Applause.—At a time like this, perhaps, when the infidel is abroad and the atheist and the disbeliever triumph in their blasphemy, it behoves the humblest Christian to range himself beneath the banners of his faith, and attest even by his martyrdom, the sincerity of his allegiance—Great applause—When I consider the source whence christianity has sprung—the humility of its origin—the poverty of its disciples—the miracles of its creation—the mighty sway it has acquired, not only over the civilized world, but which your missions are hourly extending over lawless, wildness, and imbruted region—I own the awful presence of the Godhead—nothing less than a Divinity could have done it!—The powers, the prejudices, the superstitions of the earth, were all in arms against it; it had no sword or sceptre—its founder was in rags—its apostles were lowly fishermen—its inspired prophets, lowly and uneducated—its cradle was a manger—its home a dungeon—its earthly diadem a crown of thorns! And yet, forth it went—that lowly, humble, persecuted spirit, and the idols of the heathen fell; and the thrones of the mighty trembled; and Paganism saw her peasants and her princes kneel down and worship the unarmed conqueror! [This admirable portrait of the divine spirit and attributes of christianity was hailed with the most enthusiastic peals of approbation.

If this be not the work of the Divinity, then I yield to the reptile ambition of the atheist. I see no God above—I see no government below; and I yield my consciousness of an immortal soul to his boasted fraternity with the worm that perishes! But sir, even when I thus concede to him the divine origin of our christian faith, I arrest him upon worldly principles—I desire him to produce, from all the wisdom of the earth, so pure a system of practical morality—a code of ethics more sublime in its conception—more simple in its means—more happy and more powerful in its operation; and if he cannot do so, I then say to him, Oh! in the name of your own darling policy, filch not its guide from youth, its shield from manhood, and its crutch from age! Great applause. Though the light I follow may lead me astray, still I think it is light from heaven! The good, and great and wise, are my companions; my delightful hope is harmless, if not holy, & wake me not to a disappointment, which, in your tomb of annihilation, I shall not taste hereafter! To propagate the sacred creed; to teach the ignorant; to enrich the poor; to illume this world with the splendours of the next; to make men happy, you have never seen; and to redeem millions you can never know; you have sent your hallowed missionaries forward; and never did an holier vision rise, than that of this celestial, glorious embassy. [Applause.] Methinks I see the band of WILLING EXILES bidding farewell, perhaps forever, to their native country; foregoing home, and friends & luxury; to tempt the savage sea or men more savage than the raging element; to dare the polar tempest, and the tropic fire, and often doomed by the forfeit of their lives to give their precepts a proof and an expiation—Applause. It is quite delightful to read over their reports and see the blessed product of their labours. They leave no clime unvisited, no peril unencountered.

In the South Sea Islands they found the population almost eradicated by the murders of idolatry. 'It was God Almighty, (says the royal convert of Otaheite) who sent your mission to the remainder of my people.' I do not wish to shock your Christian ears with the cruelties from which you have redeemed these islands. Will you believe it, that they had been educated in such cannibal ferociety as to excavate the earth, and form an oven of burning stones; into which they literally threw their living infants, and gorged their infernal appetites with the flesh! Will you believe [illegible] to the God of mercy—and the blood of his creatures as their best libation! In nine of these islands those abominations are extinct—infanticide is abolished; their prisoners are exchanged—society is now cemented by the bond of brotherhood, and the accursed shrines that streamed with human gore, and blazed with human unction, now echo the songs of peace and the sweet strains of piety. In India, too, where Providence, for some special purpose, permits these little insular specks to hold above one hundred million in subjection—a phenomenon scarcely to be paralleled in history; the spell of Brahma is dissolving—the chains of Caste are falling off—the wheels of Jaggernaut are scarce ensanguined—the horrid custom of self-immolation is daily disappearing—and the sacred stream of Jordan mingles with the Ganges. [Great applause]—Even the rude soldier, 'mid the din of arms, and the license of the camp, makes the bible the inmate of his knapsack, and the companion of his pillow.' Such has been the success of your missions in that country, that one of your own judges has publickly avowed, that those who left India some time ago, can form no just conception of what now exists there.

Turn from these lands to Africa, a name I now can mention without horror. In sixteen of their towns and many of their islands, we see the Sun of Christianity arising, and as it arises, the whole spectral train of superstition vanishing in air. Agriculture and civilivation are busy in the Desart, and the poor Hottentot, kneeling at the altar, implores his God not to remember the Slave trade. [Applause.] If any thing Sir, could add to the satisfaction that I feel, it is the consciousness that knowledge and Christianity are advancing hand in hand, and that wherever I see your missionaries journeying, I see schools rising up, as it were the landmark of their progress. And who can tell what the consequences of this may be in future ages? Who can tell whether those remote regions may not, hereafter, become the rivals in European improvement? Who shall place a ban upon the intellect derived from the Almighty? Who shall say that the future poet shall not fascinate the wilds, and that the philosopher and the statesman shall not repose together beneath the shadow of their palm trees? This may be visionary, but surely in a moral point of view, the advantages of education are not visionary. [A long and continued burst of applause followed this passage & in its ardour impeded the connexion & progress of our Report, and prevented us from detailing some most excellent remarks on the advantages of the cultivation of the human mind.]

These, Sir—the propagation of the Gosple—the advancement of science and of industry—the perfection of the arts—the diffusion of knowledge—the happiness of mankind here and hereafter—these are the blessed objects of your Missionaries, and compared with these, all human ambition sinks into the dust—the ensanguined chariot of the conqueror pauses—sceptre falls from the imperial grasp; the blosom withers even in the patriot's garland. But deeds liker these et require no panegyric—in the words of that dear friend whose name can never die—[In this allusion to his lamented friend, Curran, Mr. Philips was evidently much affected.] "They are recorded in the heart from whence they sprung, and in the hour of adverse vicissitude, if ever it should arrive, sweet will be the odour of their memory, and precious the balm of their consolation.

"Before I sit down, Sir, I must take the liberty of saying, that the principal objection which I have heard against your institution is with me the principa. motive of my admiration—I allude, Sir, to the diffusive principles on which it is fonnded. I have seen too much, Sir, of sectarian bigotry—as a man I abhor it—as a Christian, I blush at it—it is not only degrading to the religion that employs not only the shadow of intolerance, but it is an impious despotism in the government that countenances it. These are my opinions, and I will not suppress them. Our religion has its various denominations, but they are struggling to the same mansion, tho' by different avenues, and when I meet them on their way I care not whether they be Protestant or Presbyterian, Dissenter, or Catholic, I know them as Christians, and I will embrace them as my brethren. [This noble and liberal sentiment was received with the warmest burst of heartfelt sympathy and delight.]

I hail, then, the foundation of such a society as this—I hail it in many respects, as an happy omen—I hail it as an augury of that coming day when the bright bow of Christianity, commencing in the heavens and encompassing the earth, shall include the children of every clime and colour beneath the arch of its promise and the glory of its protection. Sir, I thank this meeting for the more than courtesy with which it has received me, and I feel great pleasure in proposing this resolution for their adoption."

PITTSBURGH.

Friday, Dec. 10, 1819

Messrs. Reich & Star have established a Type Foundery in this city; we wish these gentlemen every possible success, as the specimens which they have already given of their work prove them to be worthy of western encouragement. Mr. Reich was formerly die-sinker in the Mint at Philadelphia, and is the same person who executed the medal for Commodore Preble. This artist has also invented a new bank note which combines more of the requisites than any specimen we have yet seen; as the days of new bank issues are over, these specimens may only serve to evince the talents of Mr. Reich. His plan was submitted to the comittee of the British parliament, but it came too late to be adopted. The following letter from London to this ingenious artist may serve to shew the estimation in which his abilities are there held.

LONDON, April 10, 1819.

SIR.

The moment I received your further explanation on your ingenious Bank Note, I handed it over to the committee appointed for that purpose by Parliament; and some days after, I received an answer, acknowledging the receipt of it, but regretting at the same time, that the plan of another for a new bank note was then already adopted. Had you in the first onset given more explanation, your plan, I think, would have been adopted

It is always interesting to recur to the incidents of the revolution and even to those immediately growing out of it. We have in our possession a letter from the venerable Jefferson on the subject of the Medals given to the officers who distinguished themselves during that glorious struggle; it will be recollected that these Medals were executed under his direction, whilst he was our ambassador in France. Mr. Jefferson says "The artists employed were, 1st. Duvivier, the King's engraver enjoying the general reputation of being the first in France; 2d Dupre, a rising genius of great reputation and even preferred to Duvivier by some amateurs; 3d. Cateau a man of eminence, but not equal to the others. I paid to Duvivier for the Dies of

It is somewhat singular that Mr. Jefferson did not mention the names either of Gen. Greene or Gen. Henry Lee; these officers certainly received Medals, the first for the battle of the Eutaw, and the second for the brilliant affair of Paulus Hook. We have not the book before us but if we are not mistaken, Mr. Ramsay mentions neither Col. Washington nor Col. Howard as having received gold medals.

SPAIN.

A private letter in the Constitutional Paris paper, gives a picture of Spain the most afflicting to humanity. There is in it really something beyond the ordinary record of sufferings of nations. In one province, nothing but plots, arrests, informers, captivity, torture; and monks the judges, jailors, and executioners. In another, sounds of joy and festivity for the King's marriage, mingle dreadfully with the miserable groans of those who are dying with the fever, or, as it is called, the plague. The whole maritime border of Andalusia is infected. The expedition is abandoned, and the military clothings of the troops are burned by the public functionaries, to prevent contagion. Several English and French speculators who took out contraband goods in transport vessels, with the connivance of the Spanish government, see their bales burned before their eyes, and are themselves exposed to, or actually perishing with the disease. The soldiers have deserted and fled from the plague; but bearing it with them wherever they go; and thus is Spain in danger of becoming one great lazar, with which the rest of the 'breathing world' should cut off all communication. This is too horrible. There is one point in the letter which deserves particular attention. The transports have, it is stated, the fever on board, but some of the captains have broken the salutary regulations of confinement to which they were subjected and fled. This disorder came in a vessel from the Havana. The lading was treasure, and the avidity of the famine of the Spanish government was too ravenous to await the usual quarantine.

It will be seen by our abstract of Tuesday's Gazette, that parliament is to meet on the 22d of next month. One of the first measures which rumour says will be submitted to its consideration by ministers, is an act of indemnity in favour of the Manchester magistrates, and those who acted under their authority on the 16th of August. Suspicions are also entertained that the Habeas Corpus act for a limited period will be proposed, and that further restrictions will be suggested with regard to public meetings, for the purpose of putting down the radical reformers.

A morning paper states, as a rumor, gaining ground, 'that lord Sidmouth is to be sacrificed to the indignation of the country, & that lord Colchester is pointed out as his successor.' We know not on what authority this statement rests.

It appears by the Paris Journals that a French Colonel of Engineers, named Guillermin, has proposed a plan for the conquest of St. Domingo. He submits, that Spain shall first cede her part of the island to France—next, that he shall have at his disposal 'French ships now rotting in this port,' and 'French soldiers now languishing in idleness;' and he states that a society is prepared to advance the necessary funds for the expedition. The great premise from which the Colonel infers success, is the subjugation of Toussaint Louverture, a skilful General, with thirty five thousand devoted soldiers, by twenty five thousand Frenchmen. But he forgets the expedition under Leclerc, which proved so very fatal. The ill success of Leclerc, moreover, could easily be accounted for, otherwise than according to the view of M. Guillerman. But even supposing that twenty five thousand French might conquer thirty five thousand Haytians, could they do so now, when the population is so much improved in numbers, in intelligence, courage & military training, & when manufactories for arms and amunition are established throughout the island, at least as far as the dominion extends.

A synopsis of miscellaneous items from European Papers.

A letter from Rio Janeiro, gives the particulars of an affair of which the substance is as follows,—It has long been the custom at Rio Janeiro, whenever any of the Royal family were met, either in or out of town, for every person to bend the knee to them while passing, and if on horseback to get off, or in a gig to get out and do the same. A short time since, Commodore Bowles of the British ship Creole, having met the Queen, refused to go through the ceremony, when he was immediately attacked by the dragoon guards, pulled off his horse and very ill treated. The Commodore through the proper channel made a remonstrance to the King, and threatened vengeance unless immediate submission was made by the officers commanding the guard, and such punishment inflicted upon them as the British flag required. This remonstrance had the desired effect; the officers were immediately imprisoned, and the following day under a general guard were escorted to the Creole's quarter deck, when the officers in full uniform before the ship, begged pardon in the most submissive manner, and implored forgiveness. They were again taken to prison and the next day liberated by the Commodore.

From the National Intelligencer, Nov. 22.

STATISTICAL—COTTON, RICE, TOBACCO, SUGAR, WINE.

The National Intelligencer informs us that in New York 133 bushels of Indian corn have been gathered this year from one Acre; and 714 bushels of potatoes from one acre. This has led to the following statistical facts:

COTTON.

In 1817 the export of cotton from the United States was (85,649,328 lbs.) more than eighty five million. One acre yields at a moderate estimate, 250 lbs. of clean cotton. This whole export, therefore, is the product of only 535 square miles;—this is less than the 108th part of Georgia and less than the 520th part of the cotton regions of the U. States.

RICE.

The maximum export of rice was 73,329 tierces, (in 1790,) or (43,997,400 lbs. nearly forty four million pounds. This, on an average crop, is the produce of only sixty five square miles, which is less than the 440th part of South Carolina, and less than two thirds of the District of Columbia.

TOBACCO.

The maximum export of tobacco was 12,428 hogsheads in 1791. A hogshead is about one thousand weight; and, on average, one acre will yield one hogshead. The export, therefore, was the product of about 176 square miles, which is less than the 363d part of Virginia.—Each of the 97 counties of that state contains on an average, more than 659 square miles, viz: more than three times the quantity of land which furnished the above export.

SUGAR.

Such is, generally, the fertility of the equinoxial regions of America, that all the sugar consumed in France, estimated at twenty million kilogrammes (about 54 million pounds) may be produced on an extent of seven square leagues which is not equal to one-thirtieth part of the smallest department of France.

WINE.

About 1,600,000 arpens, or 1,350,400 acres, are in France employed in the culture of the vine. The value of the annual product is about 100,800,000 dollars at about twenty cents a gallon. In 1790. Bordeaux alone exported more than 15,000,000 gallons of wine. The 1,600,000 arpens are less than one 80th part of France, and less than one 20th part of Pennsylvania.

The value of the annual produce of these five interesting articles, may be thus estimated.

Cotton at 15 cents,	$12,847,399
Rice, 20 dol's a tierce,	1,466,580
Tobacco, 20 dol's a hhd.	6,746,680
Wine, 20 cents a gallon,	100,800,000
Sugar consumed in France, at ten cents a pound	5,400,000
	$127,259,559

For the product of these articles the following quantities of land are cultivated, viz:

	Square miles.
For cotton	555
rice	65
tobacco	176
sugar	63
wine	2110

This is a little less than three fourths of the state of Connecticut.

The authority for cotton, rice and tobacco, is Seybert's Statistical Annals, and the personal information of gentlemen of experience in the culture of those articles.

For sugar I have the authority of Humboldt's Essai Politique.

For wine I depend on Chaptal; his treatise, theoretical and practical, on the culture of the vine, and the art of making wine, brandy, spirits of wine and vinegars, simple and compound," is a truly classic work, in which he had the aid of Rozier, Parmentier and Dussieux. It contains all that the chymist or botanist, or vine cultivator, or enlightened statesman can reasonably ask or wish to know. It is in two octavo volumes of about 500 pages each, with 21 plates.

From the Albany Daily Advertiser.

Messrs. EDITORS.—If you judge the following worthy a place in your useful paper, you will oblige a subscriber by admitting it into your columns—It is a most striking example of "divine agency." It satisfactorily demonstrates, that we are watched over by a guardian providence; and verifies the old proverb (which is so universally found to be correct) 'that murder will out.' I have no hesitation in saying that it can be implicitly relied on as it came from a gentleman of the first respectability.

In the village of Manchester, Vermont, several years since, a man of respectable connexions and character, suddenly and mysteriously disappeared—all search and enquiry proved futile and in vain; till within a few weeks, a person dreamed that he had appeared to him, and informed him that he had been murdered by two persons whom he named, and that he had been buried in such a place, a few rods distant from a sapling, bearing a particular mark, which he minutely described. The same dream occurred three times successively before he awoke.—Each time the deceased seemed very solicitous for him to follow. Upon awaking, his feelings were wrought up to such a pitch, and he was impressed with a belief of the fact, that he determined to collect some friends and follow the directions laid down in the dream. He did so, and discovered to his surprise a tree marked precisely as described; also the appearance of a grave, upon digging found a human skeleton.

After this discovery, the two persons implicated in the dream were apprehended and put into confinement, and after a few days, confessed the deed. [They have been tried and convicted, and are now under sentence of death, and to be executed on the 18th of January next.—Their names are Stephen and Jesse Brown—and the name of the person murdered was Russell Colvin.]

From the Friend of India, a Bombay Paper.

SELF IMMOLATION.

'Several months ago, in the vicinity of Chandennagore, a female victim was immolated on the funeral pile, under circumstances peculiarly affecting. She was a young woman who had recently been betrothed to a young man of the same town. Every thing was prepared for the celebration of the nuptials which had been fixed for the next day! The relatives of both parties had arrived from a distance to honour the marriage with their presence; and the circle of their friends already enjoyed in anticipation the festivity which the approaching day would usher in. The preceeding evening however the bridegroom was taken ill of the Cholera Morbus and in a few hours was a lifeless corpse. Information being conveyed of the melancholy event to the bride, she instantly declared her determination to ascend the funeral pile of her betrothed lord. A long debate was then held between the relations of the bride and the priests respecting the legality of the act; the result of which was, that in such cases the chasters considering the bride as bound to her husband by the vow she had taken permitted a voluntary immolation on the funeral pile. The next day, therefore, instead of the music and joy which had been anticipated, the bride was led to the banks of the Ganges, amid the silent grief of her friends and relatives, and burnt with the dead body of her intended husband'

SQUINTING.

An English school-mistress, who had an obliquity in her vision, asked a child what S double e spelt? The child hesitated, "What do I when I look at you, said the mistress? O, now I know: Squint answered the pupil.

MORAL REFLECTION.

A firm trust in the assistance of Almighty being, naturally produces patience, hope, cheerfulness, and all other dispositions of mind, that alleviate those calamities which we are not able to remove.

FOR THE GAZETTE.

WOMAN.

See yonder rose,
The loviest of the floral train,
How rich it glows!
Its dewy leaf a sweet supplies,
To every wanton bee that flies;
Thus woman's cheek would glow in vain,
If 'twere not kiss'd, and kiss'd again.

Behold the vine,
That bears the rich nectarious fruit;
Its tendrils twine,
About the arm in am'rous play,
That plucks its treasur'd sweets away;
The spoiler thus of woman's breast,
Is twin'd about—and thus caress'd.

The changeful sky,
Now rob'd in lustre brightly glows—
Now tempests fly,
Loud threat'ning o'er the varied scene—
Or mildly glows night's lovely queen;
Light woman's cheek thus quickly shews,
Chaste beams, and clouds, and burning hues.

The wanton child,
In search of sweets roves through the vale,
And thicket wild;
Unwise adventurer! he returns,
With dainties cloy'd—and stung with thorns;
Thus lovers find, where'er they rove,
Poison and thorns in woman's love!

Steubenville, O. Dec. 3.

To Emigrants.

HAVING associated myself with a considerable company for the purpose of settling a new place in the state of Illinois, opposite the mouth of White river and Patoka, at the foot of the Grand Rapids of the Wabash, (MOUNT ... to remove to it as soon as practicable, I have contracted for the making and burning of 150,000 brick, which I wish put up next season into buildings, and the Bricklayer's and carpenter's work undertaken conjointly, the plaistering and whitewashing included. Lands adjoining the Town, and town lots, at cash prices, and cash, a proportion of each will be given in payment when the work is completed.

Having entered lands for the accommodation of settlers favourable to the views of the settlement, a considerable body adjoining the settlement and town lands, divided into lots of from 10 to 100 and 160 acres each may be had at the Congress prices, with the exception of the interest on the money paid, and a small advance to defray expences, &c

I wish to employ some persons to enclose or clear lands for me, for which I will pay in lands at cash prices. I have a body of open and timbered lands, that I would lease from 5 to 10 years on advantageous terms to emigrants unable to purchase. A convenient farm to let, by an early application to the Agent may be had.

A canal for boats and water works around the Grand Rapids of the Wabash, a company is forming to commence opening next season, that will afford employment for labourers, and no inconsiderable inducement to capatilist to invest their funds in the establishment. Considerable encouragement and aid have already been tendered for that purpose by emigrants from the Eastern States. The river is open for navigation from this place to New-Orleans all the year.

Application may be made to WM. BEAUCHAMP the Agent for the establishment, residing in Mount Carmel, or to the subscriber, residing at present in New-port. None need apply but moral characters.
